USSR

Analysis of [] of the Baku area has revealed a military storage area 1.0 nm north of Baku (40-27N 49-52E), containing probable 130-mm and 57/85-mm AAA pieces.

This is the first known sighting of probable 130-mm AAA pieces from aerial photography in the USSR. This is the heaviest of the antiaircraft guns produced by the Soviet Union and, at the present time, they are believed to have been phased out of the active Soviet Units.

The following vehicles and equipment were observed at this military storage area on []

- 122 probable 130-mm AAA pieces
- 96 probable 57/85-mm AAA pieces
- 5 probable WHIFF-type fire control radar vans
- 25 cargo/van trucks
- 14 unidentified vehicles
- 58 unidentified trailers

Review of this area on [] revealed approximately the same number of vehicles/pieces of equipment as were observed on [] [] However, due to the quality of [] it was not possible to identify the vehicles/pieces of equipment by type.
